Prevent Toxic Catastrophes & Respect our Right to Know

We demand strong chemical security policies to protect our lives, jobs, health, schools, and businesses from toxic catastrophes. The State needs to provide public access to municipal and county chemical Emergency Response Plans and information about high hazard trains crisscrossing the Garden state.

Everyday working people just can't seem to get ahead. We work longer and harder and still can't stretch our paychecks. This doesn't seem to impact the very wealthy among us who seem to play by a separate set of rules. Someone is profiting from unsafe communities and work environments - and until we identify them, we cannot address these issues

Every school day in New Jersey, children, teachers, and school staff face conditions that can cause illness or injury and that make it harder to teach and to learn. We demand healthy and modernized schools for all students and staff regardless of zip code.

New Jersey can and must address our climate and inequality crises together. Jersey Renews, launched by WEC, Environment NJ and Greenfaith, is a broad-based coalition of 70 labor, environmental and community groups fighting for state leadership on climate and good, family-sustaining jobs in the transition to a green economy.

Dear Friends,

Thank you for joining us at the 2022 WEC Awards Celebration! We appreciate your support and participation as we honor four outstanding honorees.

- Les Leopold, Co-Founder and Executive Director of the Labor Institute;
- Carmen Martino, Director of the Rutgers University-based Occupational Training & Education Consortium OTEC;
- Isles; and
- Starbucks Workers United

As we celebrate WEC and our honorees tonight, we must also acknowledge the many leaders, coalition partners and members that have helped establish and protect the fundamental health and safety safeguards that are essential to our workplaces, environment, and communities. We recognize the fight for economic and worker justice must happen hand-in-hand with the fight for racial justice. The issues are inextricably linked.

Over the past year, together we won the adoption of the Advanced Clean Truck rule which made NJ the East Coast leader in the transition to electric trucks. This is a significant step to reducing GHG Emissions which accounts for more than 40% of the total GHG emissions for the state. NJ also became the state with the largest offshore wind goal on the East Coast when Governor Murphy announced 11 gigawatts by 2040 in September.

WEC stood with our allies calling for hazard pay for essential workers and with Amazon workers who sounded the alarm about dangerous working conditions. We also continued to educate the public and policy makers on the hazard of mercury floors in schools which led to the NJ Schools Development Authority replacing floors that were found to contain mercury.

Congratulations again to the honorees. Thank you as well to everyone that sponsored, placed an ad in our commemorative journal, or purchased a ticket. We rely on your support to continue our work and we look forward to working with you to continue advancing our collective agenda.

Honoring our past and looking to the future,

Jim Young
President

Executive Director

Les Leopold

After graduating from Oberlin College and Princeton University's School of Public and International Affairs (MPA 1975), Les co-founded the Labor Institute (1976), a non-profit organization that designs research and educational programs on occupational safety and health, the environment and economics for unions, worker centers and community organizations. In addition to his current book, Defiant German, Defiant

Jew: A Holocaust Memoir from Inside the Third Reich (Amsterdam Publishers, 2020), he is also the author of Runaway Inequality: An Activist's Guide to Economic Justice (Labor Institute Press, 2015, 2016, 2018), How to Make a Million Dollars an Hour: Why Financial Elites get away with siphoning off America's Wealth (John Wiley and Sons, 2013); The Looting of America: How Wall Street's Game of Fantasy Finance destroyed our Jobs, Pensions and Prosperity, and What We Can Do About It, (Chelsea Green Publishing, June 2009); The Man Who Hated Work and Loved Labor: The Life and Times of Tony Mazzocchi, (Chelsea Green Publishing, June 2006). The Mazzocchi story won the Independent Publisher Award for best biography.

He is currently helping to build a national economic educational train-the-trainer program with unions and community groups.

Carmen Martino

Carmen Martino is the Director of the Occupational Training and Education Consortium (OTEC) and a faculty member in the Department of Labor Studies and Employment Relations at Rutgers University's School of Management and Labor Relations (SMLR). As the Director of OTEC, Carmen provides technical assistance and strategic research to community-based organizations and unions at the national and local levels. His expertise covers a range of topics that include occupational safety and health, leadership development, organizing, and stewards training.

Before joining the faculty and working closely with Debra Lancaster and Michele Ochsner at Rutgers OTEC in 2002, Carmen was the Director of Training and Education for the New Jersey Industrial Union Council and before that, he was a WEC consultant and a co-author of the first WEC newsletter back in the early 1990s.

Over the past decade Carmen's work at OTEC has led to nearly 10,000 workers receiving more than 26,000 hours of training with a focus on providing health and safety training to low-wage, immigrant, and minority workers. Much of the training was done in partnership with New Labor, a worker-center that Carmen co-founded with Lou Kimmel and Richard Cunningham in 2000. His work with New Labor produced the New Labor Safety Liaison Project that trained experienced New Labor worker trainers to file OSHA complaints, organize health and safety trainings, and conduct regular audits of worksites using a cellphone audit tool that was developed with the Liaisons. In 2014, four of New Labor's Safety Liaisons became OSHA-authorized trainers that trained and issued OSHA-10 cards to hundreds of workers in New Jersey. In that same year, two of New Labor's Safety Liaisons went to Washington D.C. and together with five other Latinos representing worker centers from throughout the country, they spoke in support of a stronger silica dust standard and were the first immigrant workers to ever provide testimony in Spanish at an OSHA standards public hearing.

Most recently, from October of 2020, thru December of 2021, OTEC lead the COVID-19 Health and Safety Project. Over the course of 16 months OTEC partnered with WEC and the Protect NJ Workers Coalition (which included worker centers, CBOs, unions, and advocacy organizations) and used $1.1 million to create synchronous, asynchronous, and in-person programs that ultimately trained 100 worker trainers, who provided 5,000 workers with over 10,000 hours of essential COVID-19 training.

Carmen currently serves in an advisory role for New Labor and is on the executive boards of WEC and NJ Communities United. He is a member of the Rutgers AAUP-AFT and has previously served on the union's Executive Council. Carmen also teaches undergraduate courses including Latino Workers in the U.S., Current Labor Problems, and the History of Labor and Work, 1880-1945. When not at work, Carmen spends all of his time with his family and every Sunday in the fall, living and dying with the Philadelphia Eagles (GO BIRDS!).

Isles

Isles was created in 1981 to pursue better, community-based ways to build self-reliance and restore and maintain environmental health. We have developed four core “pillars” that promote this work:

We train and educate; we revitalize communities; we build wealth; and we promote healthy living. These diverse tools and services offer an integrative model to foster family self-reliance and healthy, sustainable communities.

Starbucks Workers United

Starbucks workers are organizing for respect, dignity, safety and a real say in their working conditions.

The Starbucks Workers United movement began in Buffalo NY where Starbucks workers at the first store won a union election in December of 2021. Since then, Starbucks workers across the country have joined the movement as workers seek better working conditions, wages and schedules.

Workers United is supporting the Starbucks Workers United movement. An international union, Workers United represents more than 86,000 workers in the apparel, laundry, food service, hospitality, non-profit, warehouse distribution, municipal government and manufacturing industries in the United States and Canada. Its New Jersey office is in Newark. Workers United is affiliated with the Service Employees International Union (SEIU).

In the first half of 2022, more than 186 stores voted to join Workers United and petitions for elections are pending in some 300 locations. In recent months, Starbucks workers won at four New Jersey stores won their union elections - in Hopewell, Hamilton, Summit and Montclair.

Starbucks Workers United has stood strong and grown in spite of fierce opposition from the Starbucks corporation. Starbucks has been fighting against workers' efforts to unionize and has refused repeated calls to abide by the Fair Election Principles developed by the Starbucks Workers United movement. Dozens of New Jersey elected officials sent a letter to the CEO of Starbucks in April supporting the demand that Starbucks to adhere to the principles.

Starbucks is under investigation by the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) for scores of alleged violations of workers' labor rights and a number of these investigations have already led to formal NLRB complaints. In August, NLRB Region 15 won a court injunction against Starbucks in which a federal judge ordered Starbucks to reinstate seven employees at a cafe in Memphis, Tennessee who were allegedly fired for supporting the union campaign.

The Starbucks Workers United movement has garnered broad support from communities, workers' rights organizations, and elected officials. Thank you to all for your support!
